4 Steps for Giving Motivating Feedback

When you want to help someone learn and grow, the way you give feedback can make a big difference. Here are four steps you can use.

1. Why?
   - Goal: Focus on feedback that will help the person make progress toward what they want to accomplish, learn, or improve.
   - Confidence: Be clear that you’re giving feedback because you believe they can do it.
   - Care: Show that you are interested in the person. You care about their learning, growth, and success.

2. What?
   - When and Where: Give feedback that’s timely (but not before they are ready). Give it privately to avoid embarrassment.
   - Specific: Describe specific actions or behaviors you noticed that can be changed and practiced. Give concrete examples.
   - Strengths and Gaps: What where they doing that helped? What was getting in the way? (Knowing both increases learning.)

3. So What?
   - Listen, Then Share: Listen first for their ideas for steps to improve based on what you saw. Offer additional ideas, if needed.
   - Connect to Goals: Talk together about the connections to the goals that motivate ongoing practice and improvement.
   - Build Confidence: Reinforce the person's self-feedback and ideas for growth. (It builds internal motivation and commitment.)

4. Now What?
   - Reaction: Pay attention to reactions. Does the feedback ring true? Do they understand? Is it overwhelming?
   - Doable: Don't overwhelm. Identify one or two changes that can make a difference now, and focus on those.
   - Repeat: As they try new things, keep giving feedback that helps them grow. Celebrate progress along the way.

Copyright © 2018 by Search Institute, Minneapolis, MN. May be reproduced for nonprofit, educational use.